SUMMARY

I'm a marketer who enjoys solving business problems through strategy, creativity, and digital experiences. I combine social media management, visual design, and website/landing page development to help brands attract attention, build credibility, and turn visitors into customers. I bring a balance of creative thinking and technical execution—from planning content strategies and designing engaging visuals to building responsive, high-performing websites that strengthen a brand's online presence. I'm always looking for practical ways to improve performance, simplify the user experience, and create marketing assets that deliver measurable results.
